Our story

Eivind Johansen (1920–2004), The Aclima Founder

Our story dates back to 1939 when Eivind had a brilliant idea: To re-use the wool material used to make conveyor belts in the cellulose factories, and make it into wool insoles.

With the entrepreneur's craftsmanship and enthusiasm, Eivind established the company Tuna Tekstil A/S and started upcycling – long before upcycling was even a concept. After World War II, Eivind expanded into producing wool sweaters, ski suits and a number of other wool products. Today, our company is called Aclima and is a leading and innovative wool manufacturer.

About us

Since 1939 Aclima has produced high quality wool clothing for adventurers. We design our products in Norway, and have our own factory in Estonia. We only work with farms that have the highest ethical standards for animal welfare and traceability, allowing us to control the entire value and supply chain. We are always working to create the best sustainable solutions in order to reduce our environmental impact. We are proud to supply wool products to military services, fire departments, police forces, polar explorers and real outdoor people.

Hans Petter Jacobsen
CEO

"Aclima has moved a long way since our first small steps back in 1939. I have personally been in the company for more than 25 years, and we have achieved a lot during this period.

Today, Aclima is reknown for high quality products and reliable employees.

I can assure you that we will continue this work, and we will always be seeking better functional and sustainable solutions. Focused on wool clothing, we are trusted supplier to polar explorers, police, army and everyone who wants to enjoy the outdoors.

We are now making huge investments to expand our factory in Estonia and to increase the capacity. We are also hiring more people. We are very positive for the future of Aclima and our position as wool specialist. Follow us to discover more innovative wool clothing in the coming years!"

Wool Layering System

When taking part in outdoor adventures, multiple layers of merino wool give the best protection. That's why we have developed our own Wool Layering System. Several thin wool layers offer better insulation and temperature control than one single thick layer. We provide the best options for you – no matter what the temperature or level of activity. In addition, wool is a unique natural fibre with outstanding qualities: Wool is renewable, odour-free, soft against the body and insulates even when it's wet.

U Wool Underwear

Our innermost wool underwear is close fitting, comfortable and forms the whole basis of our Wool Layering System.

1st Wool Layer

Our first layer of wool insulates and wicks away sweat – both during summer and winter activities.

2nd Wool Layer

Our second layer of wool absorbs moisture from the inner layers and provides extra insulation.

3rd Wool Layer

Our third layer of wool provides even more protection against cold temperatures and wind.

An example of layering

To make the layering system more comprehensible, we have made layer suggestions for each product presented in this catalogue. The layers suggested from us is not set in stone, it is to be regarded as an expert suggestion and recommendation from Aclima.

Here you see an example on how to dress for high level activity during winter.

LightWool

Remarkably light and comfortable, this 100% Merino wool jersey will not only keep you warm in cold weather, even when your clothes are wet; LightWool also has a cooling effect on warm days, making it a great choice for everyday activities all year round.

100% Wool (Merino).

These products offer a high degree of insulation used as base layer, and high moisture transportation and breathability as a single layer. The WoolNet Light products are specially made for high performance activities, such as running in the mountains, hiking and trekking.

WoolNet Original

One of Aclima's biggest success stories, the WoolNet garments are unique on the market. The warp knitted wool mesh construction traps body heat while releasing excess heat at the same time. Wool's odor minimizing qualities make WoolNet a smart base layer choice when taking long hikes, hunting, or on an expedition when there's no hope of taking a hot shower anytime soon.

Woolnet: 80% Wool (Merino), 20% Polyamide

Rib: 96% Wool (Merino), 4% Elastane

Fibre: 19.5 micron

Limited edition - Contact your salesrepresentative or Aclima directly for ordering.

Aclima ReBorn

In an exciting and ground-breaking cooperative project with esteemed Prato-based Italian textile companies Filati Omega and Pontetorto, Aclima has brought out recycled Merino wool products called ReBorn.

Leftover fabric are sent from our factory in Estonia to Prato in Italy and sent back as recycled fabric to Estonia where it is made into new garments.

Our new ReBorn wool terry

The new ReBorn wool terry is made with 62% Merino wool (recycled), 23% Polyamide (recycled), 12% Polyester (recycled) and 3% other fibre. The loops on the outside create loft, and give great insulating abilities when used as a mid layer. The inside of the fabric is lightly brushed for a soft and comfortable surface. The zipper is recycled and the zip pullers and logo badge is made out of fish leather.

Children/Junior

Good quality, warm and well-designed clothing for children are a top priority for most parents. As a clothing manufacturer children are for sure our best test team! On the following pages we are presenting our collections for Children and Junior. Warm, soft and comfortable garments in pure Merino wool.

Accessories

Wear a wool hat to avoid heat loss from the head! When the brain tells the body that the head is getting cold, it will always "sacrifice" hands and feet to maintain the temperature in the brain. This, in turn, can result in localised frostbite on the hands and feet. Therefore, it is advisable to use a wool hat on your head and not take it off as soon as you are feeling warm. See our collection of hats, headbands, headovers or balaclavas in wool, as well as our wool socks, gloves, mittens and pulse heaters. Stay warm in style with high-performance wool accessories for men and women.
